NEW COMMISSIONERS TOOK OATH OF OFFICE YESTERDAY

Commission Form of Government Now a Reality in Greensboro---Short Speeches by New Officials.

Yesterday afternoon at 3:06 o'clock o'clock Mayor Thomas J. Murphy called the board of commissioners to order and the commission form of government became a reality in Greensboro. The formal exercises attendant upon the swearing in of the newly-elected municipal officers were brief and consisted of short talks by Aldermen King and Albright and the administration of the oath to Mr. Murphy by Retiring Mayor Stafford. The oath was administered at exactly two minutes past three o'clock and Mayor Murphy then administered the oath to Commissioners E. A. Brown and J. G. Foushee, Jr.

After the oath had been taken Mayor Murphy called the board to order and called on Commissioner of Public Works Foushee who expressed thanks for the support accorded him. He said that he hoped the citizens of the city would come direct to him when they had any criticism of his actions to make, that he intended to strive to do that which would be to the best interests of the city and he wanted the people to feel free to call upon him at any time. Commissioner of Public Safety Brown was then called upon and he stated that he was there as a representative of the entire city and he wanted the support of the entire city in the work. He urged that every citizen call upon him at any time he could be of service.

Mayor Murphy then made a short talk in which he emphasized the importance of harmonious effort among the members of the board, for upon this, he said, the growth of the city depends. The economy shown by the president of the United States and government of a State will filter down and effect even the lower classes of the citizenship, Mayor Murphy said. He urged that the board as a whole set an example of economy and thrift that would cause the people of Greensboro to arouse and as individuals strive to make the city bigger and better as well as to push their own business interests more.

Greensboro is the first city in the State of North Carolina to put into operation the commission form of government and the success of her venture will be watched with interest by all the larger cities in the State. Wilmington is the only other city in North Carolina that has the commission form of government and the city by the sea will share the honors that will come to Greensboro if the commission form of government is a success. Greensboro people believe that the commission form will be a success here. While some people are looking for a regular upheaval along all lines the more conservative citizens know that the changes will be gradual and slow, it being a well-known fact that a complete change all of a sudden would not be for the best interests of the city. It is not expected that very many changes will be made in the personnel of the city officials.

The commissioners will hold their first meeting this morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of discussing the order of business and the time for holding the regular daily meeting. The board will also elect a city clerk at today's meeting and probably a city attorney also. The next officer will be the chief of police.

The Board of Aldermen met in adjourned session at 2:30 o'clock, Mayor Stafford presiding and the following aldermen answering to the roll call: Albright, Clendenin, Ellington, Glascock, King Smith. The minutes of the previous session were read and approved. The bill for the registrars and judges of election were ordered paid. Aldermen Glascock reported a compromise with the Guilford Lumber Company, regarding the amount of a bill and recommended that the revised bill be paid. The report was adopted. The clerk then read the report of the canvassing board and the candidates receiving the largest vote in the election were declared elected.

It was announced that all business has been disposed of and Mayor Stafford asked the members of the board if they wished to say anything before the term of the board ended. Alderman King arose and extended his sympathy to the commissioners, saying that he knew that they would not have smooth sailing and was not inclined to congratu-

Jurors Drawn for June Term United States Court

United States Court Clerk J. M. Millikan yesterday drew the jurors who are to serve during the regular June term of United States court, to convene here on the first Monday in June. There are no cases of especial interest to come up at that term, the case of general interest in Greensboro being the one against W. V. Moss, who is charged with impersonating a United States revenue officer with intent to defraud. It will be remembered that Moss is the young man who visited the Elks' Club, King's Cigar store and other places in the city and inspected their places after the customs of revenue officers. It developed that Moss was an imposter and he was arrested. He claims that he was on a spree at the time and did not know what he was going.

The list of jurors drawn are as follows:

RALEIGH

Whiskey Seller Takes Out Government License to do Business.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, May 3.—W. C. Poland, proprietor of the Academy of Music news stand, who was arrested for having four barrels and more of bottled whiskey in his place, has taken out government license to handle liquor and has assurances of the possibility of adjusting his troubles with Judge Connor when court convenes here later in the month. The city and state authorities, however, are moving for his prosecution for violating the state prohibition law. A number of the worst "blind tigers" here have government licenses to handle whiskey thus getting free from surveilance of revenue officers and taking chances for evading the local authorities.

RALEIGH GETTING READY TO HUSTLE FOR CONVENTIONS

With New Auditorium Completed Capital City Can Accommodate Large Gatherings—New Administration Takes Hold—Craven County for Farm Life Schools.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, May 3.—Administrations changed in Raleigh at noon today, Mayor J. S. Wynne and his board of aldermen and other officials giving place to Mayor James I. Johnson and other officers elected in the election Monday. The aldermen for the new administration are C. A. Johnson, Alexander Webb, E. D. Peebles, J. C. Ellington, W. A. Cooper, George M. Harding, Joseph G. Brown and J. Sherwood Upchurch. Thomas Badger succeeds Alexander Stronach as police justice; H. E. Glenn succeeds W. W. Wilson as clerk. Mayor Johnson had served two terms as mayor when Mayor Wynne defeated him for that office two years ago. Now Johnson takes the reins of government again.

With Raleigh's splendid auditorium nearing completion the city authorities are going after conventions and meetings generally to come to Raleigh for their sessions. The very first act of the board of aldermen who assumed the reins of government today was to pass a resolution inviting the North Carolina Federation of Women's clubs now in session at Asheville, to come to Raleigh for the next session and to the North Carolina Association of Funeral Directors to hold their next session here. They are now in session at High Point. These bodies, or rather representatives at each, were telegraphed to press these invitations upon their respective organizations.

Deputy United States Marshal R. W. Ward and assistant deputies left today for Atlanta to carry five prisoners to serve terms in the penitentiary to serve sentences imposed by Judge Connor at the New Bern court. One of the most notable prisoners is B. F. Sanders, the notorious violator of revenue laws, especially retailing whiskey, who is to serve one year and a day. It is a notable fact that his brother, Dr. Sanders, has been indicted by the New Bern court grand jury for attempting to influence the result of the trial of B. F. Sanders by writing letters to witnesses and to prospective jurors, calculated to influence them in the trial.

The news to the state department of education that the people of Craven county have voted by a large majority for the establishment of a county farm-life school stirs gratification here, it being the first election under the act of the recent legislature that provides for the state to appropriate $2,500 annually toward maintenance of such schools where the county provides a $25,000 plant and an additional $2,500 for maintenance. Robeson county is to follow on May 9 and there is every indication that this will also be carried by a big majority.

Corresponding Secretary Livingston Johnson, of the North Carolina State Baptist Convention Board of Missions finds in closing the convention year May 1 that this state has fallen $4,000 behind the previous year in contributions to foreign missions, being $36,800 against $40,800 for the previous year and that the fund for home missions is $700 short of last year, being $20,400. He says reports from the Southern Foreign Mission Board headquarters in Richmond show a $70,000 debt for the Southern Baptists, the biggest in the history of the Southern Baptist convention.

Mrs. W. J. Willoughby, an aged and esteemed lady, passed away at her home here yesterday, aged 77 years. With her were her nieces, Mrs, J. W. Cooper, Portsmouth; Mrs. Sallie Underwood, Raleigh. Also Mr. Cooper, of Portsmouth. The funeral was held today, Dr. O'Kelly, of the First Baptist church officiating with Rev. H. M. North, of Edenton Street Methodist church, assisting.

With officers newly elected for the ensuing year headed by W. H. Williamson as president, the Country Club of Raleigh starts on the second year of its career with every assuranec that during

Baron Uchida, Ambassador From Japan, Sees Only Peace Ahead

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

BARON YASAYU UCHIDA, ambassador from Japan to the United States, has recently been much in the public eye because of the war talk that has been heard. Every time the baron has had a chance to speak he has unhesitatingly denied the possibility of trouble between his country and Uncle Sam. He was the guest of honor recently at a banquet of the American Asiatic association in New York, at which steps were taken to arrange for definitely setting rumors of possible war at rest. Baron Uchida has had a long training as a diplomat, and he has filled the post at Washington most successfully. He was born in 1865 and was educated at the Imperial university in Tokyo. In 1887 he became an attache of the Japanese embassy at Washington and later was transferred to London, where he was secretary of legation. He was sent from there to the same position in Peking, but was called home later to serve as vice minister of foreign affairs. He later returned to Peking as ambassador to China and was transferred to the post in Vienna in 1907. After two years there he came to Washington. His wife is the daughter of a wealthy Japanese shipowner, but she was graduated at Bryn Mawr, near Philadelphia, and she has proved popular as a hostess in Washington.

Washington, May 3.—The American embassy received information this afternoon to the effect that the American residents at Cuernavaca were safe, the conditions there having returned to normal. No word was given out regarding the thousand Americans said to be cut off from escape from Mazatlan, which town is surrounded by rebels and the harbor blocked by a Mexican gunboat. Reports telegraphed here by refugees crossing the border say that the railroad and wire communication with Mazatlan have been destroyed.

CAN TOWN MAKE RAILROAD CHANGE GRADE CROSSINGS

This Important Question Now Being Argued Before the Supreme Court---Court Badly Divided on Issue Raised.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, May 3.—The case of the City of Goldsboro vs. Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co. involving the right of a board of aldermen to compel a railroad company to make its track grade conform to the street grade by lowering the track was reargued before the Supreme court today, ex-Governor Aycock appearing for the town of Goldsboro and W. C. Monroe for the railroad company. This is the case in which the court is so badly divided that the justices were unable to decide the question and the reargument was called for by the court with a view to adjusting differences in view if possible. Justice Allen is not sitting in this case and this leaves the court with only four judges sitting—Chief Justice Clark, and Associate Justices Walker, Hoke and Brown. Hence there is the possibility of a tie that would prevent the court from passing on the issues involved, issues that are vital to every railroad town in the State. Ex-Governor Aycock represented to the court today that Goldsboro is expending over $150,000 on her streets, has established a general scheme of drainage for the promotion of the health of the city and this is worked out right up to the railroad which the city demands shall lower about five squares of trackage six to eight inches to conform to this drainage grade. It would cost the railroad company about $3,000 and he insists that in the exercise of her police power the city has the right to compel this even though, as the railroad company insists, it owns its right of way and has held it for a longer period than the town of Goldsboro has been in existence. The fact that the railroad company holds this property in the town makes the company ameanable to the police control of the city when it comes especially to questions involving maintenance of healthful drainage scheme and such like. The case is one that is being watched with keen interest by the legal profession and by officialdom of cities and towns the state over.

Fifteen Opinions Handed Down by Supreme Court

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, May 3.—One of fifteen opinions this evening by Supreme court was that of Virginia Carolina Peanut company vs. Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, Martin county. The issue involved damages for a delay in the transportation of peanut factory machinery and whether notice of peculiar circumstances necessitating delivery by certain time, given during performance of transportation, but in time for transportation company to remedy possible delay, could be taken into consideration in estimating damages.

The court holds that evidence of such notice is not competent and not entitled to consideration in passing upon the amount of damages. The machinery had been shipped when notice of urgent necessity for delivery by a certain time was served on company.

The full list of opinions follow: Virginia-Carolina Peanut Co. vs. Atlantic Coast Line, from Martin county, new trial. Boney vs. Atlantic Coast Line, Duplin, no error. Fann vs. North Carolina Railroad Co., Guilford, affirmed. J. T. Wilson vs. Life Insurance Co. of Virginia, affirmed. Anderson vs. Suburban Corporation, Guilford, no error. Shell vs. Roseman, Iredell, no error. Robertson and Creed vs. Marshall, Surry, affirmed. State vs. Houston, Mecklenburg, no error. McWhirter vs. McWhirter, no error. LAWYERS GIVEN BIG FEE BY COURT.

Chicago, May 3.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday fixed $50,000 as the rightful fees for counsel for former Capt. Oberlin M. Carter who served a prison term for defrauding the government in harbor work at Savannah, Ga.

The attorney sought to tie up $208,000 that there might be sufficient funds on hand to pay their fees and expenses. Horace G. Stone and Nathaniel C. Sears, are counsel in the court of appeals. Senator Foraker and John S. Daish are counsel in the United States Supreme court. Senator Foraker was not a party to the proceedings before the court of appeals.

In its ruling yesterday the court of appeals decided that an allowance of $50,000 each was sufficient for the counsel in both courts and $10,000 sufficient for all remaining counsel.

SEA MAY ENGULF NEW JERSEY COAST.

Trenton, May 3.—The question whether or not the coast of New Jersey is sinking at the rate of about two feet per century, with consequent important results along several scientific lines, is to be officially investigated this summer. At the meeting at the State House yesterday afternoon of the Board of Managers of the State Geological Survey, State Geologist Kummel reported that he had made arrangements with Professor D. W. Johnson, of Harvard University, to make the necessary research.

Some scientists have held that the Atlantic seacoast was sinking at the rate of two feet every hundred years, and the theory has come to be quite generally accepted. Professor Johnston will come to this State and prosecute the study under a research fund established at Harvard. The result is expected to have important bearings on the coast levels established in this state 25 years ago.

THE COMMISSION ELECTION AND THE COMMISSION.

Greensboro's first commission election has passed into history and the first commissioners have taken charge of the city government and the city's affairs. The campaign preceding the election was not, as a whole, discreditable to the city. There were some features of it and some incidents which ought to have been eliminated before they happened—if The Telegram may be permitted to perpetrate an Irish bull. No doubt, however, the men who made the mistakes of the campaign now regret the fact that these mistakes were made even more than the public does. On the whole the campaign was conducted, as far as the public could see and with reference to the impression made upon the outside world, on a high plane. To a large extent it was free from personalities and it measured up to about as high standard as could be expected to be attained in the first commission election. The political idea and political features were not entirely eliminated. They probably never will be entirely eliminated from commission elections so long as human nature remains as it is at present. When all men become perfect we may expect to be able to pull off popular elections without any of the unpleasant and unfortunate occurrences incident to political campaigns. Not until then, however, can we expect to entirely do away with what is commonly known as politics, in the selection of men through popular elections to fill official stations of public trust.

The first commission election has passed and it has evidently left but little bad feeling in the minds of the majority of the voters. The defeated candidates and their friends are disappointed, of course, but they are not disgruntled, as far as this newspaper has been able to guage sentiment. In fact, we believe Greensboro has a reputation for emerging from contests of this nature with everybody feeling reasonably well and everybody determined that no matter what the result of elections, the welfare of the city must be conserved and the city must go forward and grow. That appears to be the prevailing sentiment since the commission election.

Doubtless there are a few people here who would like to see the commission plan fail; and others who would like to see it fail in the hands of men for whom they did not cast their ballots; but these two classes total a very small number of citizens. The great majority, regardless of their attitude in favor of or in opposition to the commission form, now that it has been adopted here, sincerely desire to see the plan succeed. Therefore, we believe that all public spirited, liberal minded, progressive citizens, no matter what their personal views of commission government, will combine and co-operate with the commissioners to the end that Greensboro may be successfully governed and all the interests of the city advanced.

The Telegram believes the commission will succeed, if the citizens pursue this course. As far as this newspaper is aware, the commissioners elected are good and competent men; as are the men who were defeated. We believe the commission plan will be successful in the control of the men who have been elected, and we believe it would have succeeded in the control of those who were defeated. This newspaper had no candidates for commissioners, and views this matter from a strictly impartial standpoint. The Telegram is interested only in the success of good government for this city. We desire to see the affairs of the city properly administered, and to see the place develop and build up and grow to the largest, and in every respect, the best city in the State. Therefore, The Telegram pledges its honest co-operation to do anything in its power that is right and just to assist the commissioners in their work. The Telegram may some times take issue with them in regard to measures or policies, and in that case this newspaper will not hesitate to express its views, if we consider the question at issue worth discussion; but The Telegram does not propose to occupy a critical attitude toward the commission, stand afar off, and seek only to find fault. We will co-operate with the commissioners in so far as possible; encourage them in their efforts to wisely administer the city's affairs; and if it can be of any assistance whatever in furthering the interests of progressive government in Greensboro, this newspaper will always be found striving to that end.

"Get out your old straw hats," advises the Raleigh Times. Why not purchase new ones and to that extent help to make business good?

The last oyster month has gone, and most of the elections being over the candidates will quit fishing for votes and go after fish.

The case of the "bathtub trust" is to come up in Federal court in Richmond on May 25th. Wonder if the "bathtub trust" will be accused of putting "water" in its stock?

Dispatch says Wilmington will not have another election for thirty days In the meantime, somebody will have an opportunity to start a movement to build an industry in Wilmington.

Raleigh had clean up week and election day the same week. A week was necessary to clean up the city, but a number of the candidates were "cleaned up" in one day.

Several of the infant industries of the country are strong enough to send full grown men to the United States Senate. An infant industry that is able to own a Senator ought to be able to stand alone without any tariff props.

Washington Post says that Woodrow Wilson saws wood and hoes his own row. The Wilmington Dispatch "wood" not have been guilty of anything worse that that, no matter what the provocation.

James H. Preston defeated E. Clay Timanus for mayor of Baltimore. It could not have been on account of the last mentioned gentleman's name, as he is a former mayor of the city. Perhaps it was because Preston was a Democrat.

Raleigh Times says that city will be eastern terminus of the Carolina interurban lines. Without any disposition to dispute this assertion The Telegram ventures to say that Greensboro will ultimately be the biggest and best town on the interurban between Anderson and Raleigh.

The Lexington Dispatch is 29 years old and it has been published for fifteen years by Henry B. Varner. Under Varner's management the Dispatch has developed into the leading weekly newspaper of the State. May the paper and its editor both live long and prosper greatly.

The town of Spencer has a Republican mayor. J. D. Dorsett defeated an Independent and a Democrat for that office. The straight Democratic ticket for aldermen was elected, so that Spencer will now proceed to give an exhibition of municipal government by a divided house.

Clean-up week in Greensboro accomplished splendid results; but one cleaning a year is not sufficient for any city. The city must be kept clean, and to keep it clean requires constant attention and effort. Let Greensboro people remember this and go right along cleaning up all the time. In that way Greensboro can be kept clean.

The North Carolina Funeral Directors' Association, in session in High Point, will not be called upon to act in its official capacity, municipally speaking, while in that city. High Point is a live wire, as the "planters" will discover. As an evidence of this fact, note that High Point has just voted $100,000 of bonds for public improvements. The dead towns always shy at bonds and public improvements.

Better take advantage of that offer and get The Telegram for another year for the old price. The price is now higher, but the offer, good until May 15th, enables old and new subscribers to get it for one year at the old price. The Telegram is undoubtedly worth much more than it has ever been in its history and, therefore, it is worth more than we ask for it at this rate. As a matter of fact it is worth the new price. So do not overlook the opportunity to get it another year at the old price.

Do We Lose the Interurban?

Elsewhere in The Dispatch today is printed an editorial of the Charlotte Chronicle relating that Davidson county is out of the running for the Interurban. We don't know where Editor Harris got his information, but we do know that he is not the kind that goes off "half cocked." He generally knows what he is talking about and he is right nine times out of ten, or oftener. It will be remembered that we predicted this months ago and there were those who thought that we knew not whereof we spoke. They scoffed only and declared that the Southern Power Company needs Lexington, Thomasville and Davidson county more than Lexington, Thomasville and Davidson county needs the Southern Power Company, ignoring the obvious fact that the Southern Power Company could tap an even richer territory than this by running its lines by way of Mooresville to Winston-Salem. Now that W. J. Oliver, and others, have begun work on an interurban line from Concord to Salisbury it begins to look even darker for us. This line will eventually be extended on to Charlotte and the Southern Power Company, which is backing the Oliver interests in this deal, will have its line to Concord, Salisbury and Spencer. Just now it looks like Mooresville and Winston-Salem have the big prize "cinched."

We have been trying to hammer it into the heads of the people of this county that it is unwise to make a practice of robbing corporations just because they are corporations and have money and can be robbed. We have no special interest in the Southhern Power Company. Everybody knows that. We are interested in fair play and we want to see the Southern Power Company, the Southern Railway Company, and every other corporation—big and little, weak and strong—get the same consideration from the people and the courts of Davidson county that the individual citizen gets. That's all. The farmers of Davidson county could afford to donate the right of way and give the Southern Power Company a big bonus, rather than lose this great interurban development project. What are they going to do about it? It strikes us that some sort of effort should be made to set things right with the Southern Power Company, for it would be an awful blow to this section to lose the road.—Lexington Dispatch.

The Acid Test.

Romance spread its glamor over the McAdoo hotel in the city of Greensboro one day last week and the little blind god swept the stakes into his lap without a murmur. "He saw her first this morning before breakfast," recites The Greensboro Record in recording the episode: "he loved her, and at 11 a. m. he married her." Could any wedding, however sumptuous in its appointments and however widely advertised in the press, have more satisfactory and complete tale told of it?

The groom was a French Canadian, the bride a working girl in Greensboro. Their acquaintance came about through a matrimonial bureau—as a result of an advertisement, in other words. So much impressed was the gentleman in the case with the lady's photograph duly mailed him upon request that he left his far-away home in northern Maine to travel the path that leads to the altar—rather longer than usual in this case. Ordinarily we should have fears for the happiness of any pair united in such haste. Matrimony, as we feel constrained to repeat at stated intervals, is a most serious proposition and should not be contemplated—as a rule—without prolonged consideration. A single phrase in The Record's story, however, is amply sufficient to dispel all doubts as to future happiness in this particular instance. It is stated that "he saw her first before breakfast and loved her." If his emotion could withstand the shock inevitable upon a fasting introduction it may be guaranteed to weather all but the most severe storms of life's ocean.

We would like very much to recommend a "before-breakfast" interview to all whose wedding cards are at present in the hands of the engravers. Reflecting upon the long and heartrending array of broken engagements which might follow such a recommendation, however, we reluctantly refrain.—Charlotte Observer.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Undigested Public Opinion.

New York Globe.

Give the people the full referendum, said Mr. Berger in introducing his bill into the House for abolishing the United States Senate, and "God knows progress will be slow enough," His phrase "full referendum" is somewhat ambiguous; it might be interpreted in several ways. But what Mr. Berger appears to have meant was that with the people in immediate control of every public official progress would loiter on the way.

Judging from the experience of the Western communities now living under these Utopian conditions, what he says is literally true. The fifth recall election occurred in Tacoma a couple of weeks ago, and No. 6 is due early in May. As a two month's record this is somthing to be proud of, but, as Mr. Berger inplies, it isn't progress—or, at least, not obvious progress.

It is not easy to reconcile Mr. Berger's concluding remarks with his resolution. The latter, besides providing for the extermination of the Senate, shears the veto power from the President and takes away the right of the Courts to pass upon the constitutionality of legislation. In other words, it gives the man in the street direct, untrammeled and easy access to the statute books, removes all checks and does away with any pause to give second thought and better information an opportunity to prevent mistakes.

It may be contended that what Mr. Berger meant to say was that even after his improvements had been secured progress would still be tediously slow. But, as it is clear that they would have the effect of slowing it down rather than accelerating it, of tangling government up in an inextricable confusion of half-baked theories and temporary fads, this interpretation seems heardly reasonable.

Household Hints

To make tea which is to taste just right when served, these things are necessary; Good tea, boiling water, and a hot teapot.

To clean feathers put them into a paper bag with a cupful of Indian meal, half a cupful of flour, and three teaspoonfuls of borax, then shake.

The white of a raw egg is the most satisfactory of pastes. Papers used for covering down jam will hold securely and be quite airtight if brushed over on the inside with the white of an egg. The white of an egg is also used for mending glass, or china ornaments, but, of course, it will not stand water. Still, it is not always necessary that a cement should do this, and the white of an egg has the merit of being quite as imperceptible when dry.

Pickles and vinegar should always be kept in glass jars or bottles, When they are kept in any form of glazed ware the vinegar acts on the glaze and forms poison.

Do not hang white China silk up to dry after washing, but wrap, after wringing slightly, in a piece of white goods. Iron without drying, and it will not turn yellow.

Tarnished silver is easily cleaned with powdered whiting mixed to a paste with ammonia and water. Rub the paste on with one leather and have another leather to polish it off again.

Oil stains on clothing should be covered with soap and washed with cold water before the garment is sent to the laundry. They may be removed with turpentine.

After scrubbing with soap and water in the usual way, take a clean dry cloth and a handful of salt, and rub the salt on the same way as the grain of the wood, then leave it to dry. Should any salt remain it only needs to be wiped off with a clean dry duster. The result is a beautiful white table. Pastry boards and rolling pins should be cleaned in the same way.

When grating nutmegs, remember they will grate best if started from the blossom end.

When cleaning bronze ornaments, first brush out of the dust, then apply a very little sweet oil over the article. Polish first with a soft duster, finally with a wash leather.

Inkstains on silver or plated articles may be removed with a paste made of chloride of lime and water. This should be left on for a little while and then washed off in warm water.

Foley's Kidney Remedy Acted Quickly.

M. N. George, Irondale, Ala., was bothered with kidney trouble for many years. "I was persuaded to try Foley Kidney Remedy, and before taking it three days I could feel its beneficial effects. The pain left my back, my kidney action cleared up, and I am so much better I do not hesitate to recommend Foley Kidney Remedy." For Sale by Howard Gardner.

Appendicitis and many other ills come from Constipation and over-loading with food which the system cannot care for. The bowels must be cleared and antisepticised to give their normal functions and this should not be done by strong Cathartics, as every physician will tell you. The Strength Of Woman

It Converted a Den of Gamblers Into Happy Homes.

By HELOISE BRAYTON.

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

A number of men were one evening sitting around the stove in a country store talking about the rapid growth of certain western towns. Among them was an old man of the name of Neilson, who was commonly called "the boomer," since he had made several fortunes booming towns. Being called upon to narrate some of his experiences, he told the following story:

One of the towns I boomed I called after myself—Neilson. It was on the line of a projected railroad that was to cross another projected railroad I bought all the property at this crossing that had been staked out by the chief engineers of the two roads and started my town.

The trouble with new towns is that they are composed almost exclusively of men. For awhile Neilson was the worst place on the face of the earth. It was full of gambling shanties, and I couldn't get the men to work because they preferred to gamble. I got them together on several occasions, telling them what a bright prospect we had before us if they would only be respectable, but that settlers wouldn't come in so long as they made the place uninviting. This would sober them for awhile, but it wasn't long before they would drop back to their former condition.

My right hand man was a Swede named Olaf Hendrickson. I was talking with him lugubriously one day about the immorality of the town when he said to me:

"Mr. Neilson, you can never make a community of men respectable without a fair proportion of the opposite sex. Women are essential to men just as men are to women, and children are essential to both. My advice to you is to make some move with a view to inducing respectable women to come in here, marry these men and establish families."

"You're a bachelor, Hendrickson," I replied. "How comes it that you, holding such opinions on the necessities of matrimony, are not married?"

"That is because before I came to this country I loved a girl in Sweden. When I parted from her I told her I would send for her just so soon as I could get together the money for the purpose. Ten years have passed, and I have not been successful. A year ago I wrote her that she had better not wait for me any longer, and since then I have not heard from her."

I was so impressed with Hendrickson's views that, leaving him in charge of my plant, I went east for some women. I visited institutions where I might find those who needed to be provided for, and as some of my men were foreigners I enlisted the interest of the immigrant commissioners at New York. I could have returned in a few weeks with all the women I wanted, but I must have good moral ones and fairly attractive, so I wouldn't take any one without satisfying myself in this respect. Finally I got together the number of volunteers I wanted, apportioned among Americans and foreigners as my men were native or foreign born. I struck one woman from Sweden, older than the rest, whom I intended for Hendrickson.

Meanwhile my right hand man was busy erecting cabins intended for temporary residences for the women until they should become wives. He had no difficulty in getting the men to work for such a purpose, and the cabins, he wrote me, sprang up like mushrooms.

When all was ready I put the women into one passenger car, which they filled, and took them out to Neilson. On the way I talked with them to prepare them for the shock they would receive at meeting their future husbands and assured them that they would have no difficulty in bringing the men to the condition of human beings instead of that of wild animals, to which they had sunk.

The Swede whom I had intended for Hendrickson told me that, having nowhere to go on her arrival in America, she had been attracted by the name of my town, Neilson being a common name in Sweden. She said that, being elderly, she would not likely be chosen for a wife. Indeed, she did not care to marry; she hoped to make herself useful in some particular way. It wasn't best, she said, that all the women should be married. What would the world do without the old maid aunties? I told her that I had a husband, one of her own countrymen, picked out for her, but she declared that I must permit her to remain single.

Of course the day of our arrival was a gala day at Neilson. I was obliged to transport my cargo some twenty miles from the railroad and hired all manner of vehicles for the purpose. The population met us a mile from the town and escorted us, marching beside the wagons, to the recently erected cabins. The men behaved themselves much better than could have been expected. Indeed, their condition of barbarism was but a lapse from respectability.

Do you know that some matches were made on the road before reaching the town? But I had cautioned the girls to go slow and not marry any man without at least two days' courtship. They all agreed to this, and there was not a wedding until forty-eight hours after our arrival. That time was scarcely up when there were a dozen. The truth is there were no villains in my town, because as soon as I had discovered that a man was inherently bad I had fired him. I was surprised to see that as soon as the women arrived the men began to slick up. Razors made their appearance, and the long, scraggly locks were cut down. The second day after the women's coming I noticed several men in boiled shirts.

On the night of the feminine entry not a gambling shanty was doing any business, and, although their earnings picked up later on, they received their deathblow. On the evening of the women's arrival the men were all visiting and mating and from that time forward continued their visits till all the women had left the cabins and they were as deserted as the gambling holes.

The Swedish woman, Lena Erickson, either was not chosen or had declined any offer she might have received. She was but twenty-eight and good looking, and I don't doubt it was her own fault that she did not become a wife. She busied herself in helping the young wives make their homes, many of whom were very young and had little idea of fixing up a house. Lena would take hold of a bride's residence and in half a day transform it from bare walls and floors into a human habitation. The floor would be at least in part covered and the windows would be draped. Some of these things Lena did herself, others she showed the young wives how to do. Then she would have the husband digging in the yard and flowers would be set out.

We were all so busy that I took no thought for my intention of bringing my man Hendrickson and Lena Ericson together. Indeed, she was serving so valuable a purpose as a single woman that I abandoned my plan. As soon as the women arrived I sent Hendrickson away to stock up in a lot of articles that their presence rendered requisite. It was my intention to set him up as proprietor of a dry goods store. Then it struck me that as such he would need a woman's assistance badly, if indeed she would not be the real manager. So as soon as he returned I told him I had a wife for him, and since he had lost the girl he had loved he would better marry the one I had selected. He sighed and said that if I thought best he would consent, though it was evident he did so reluctantly. I left him to propose my plan to Lena. She positively declined. I argued with her for awhile, but finding I could not move her I told her that I wished her to become one of the managers of the dry goods store, and to this she gladly consented.

The next morning I summoned Hendrickson and Lena to meet me at my house that we might together lay plans for the establishment of the store. Hendrickson arrived first, and I was discussing the business matter with him when the door opened and Lena Ericson came in.

The two stood looking at each other as if wonder stricken for a moment, then rushed into each other's arms.

"Lena!"
"Olaf!"

As soon as they were quieted down they explained to me that Lena was the girl Hendrickson had left in Sweden. She had saved some money, just enough to take her to New York, and, knowing that her lover was somewhere in the west, had availed herself of my transportation to get farther in her quest.

That's the end of my story, gentlemen, except to add that the rascally civil engineers of the two railroads had staked them out where they were not intended to cross for the purpose of secretly buying up the property where they were intended to cross.

But our town was not left out in the cold. The power of the softer sex having been demonstrated, I made up my mind to find out what the women of Neilson could do in saving us from that fate. I picked out several of the best of them and sent them, headed by Mrs. Hendrickson, to the general offices of the roads to tell the story of the salvation of the men of Neilson. I sent by them a letter corroborating any statement they might make, giving a picture of what the town was before they came and what it was later, inviting the railroad officers to send some one to make an inspection and report. The women made a deep impression, and the vice presidents of both roads came to see Neilson. The result was that the roads were crossed five miles west of where the engineers had intended and insured the prosperity of our city."

Authetic Information Concerning Things Just Out.

One of the latest appliances to add to comfort and convenience is a portable door hold, for the home or office, that holds the door at any angle and prevents its slamming. It permits ventilation without a draught, and is released by pressure of the foot. Unattached it can be used anywhere. Its removal leaves no mark or disfigurement upon the door.

Among the latest importations is a Japanese parasol that is a triumph of artistic beauty. It is made of embroidered habatui silk, in various lovely shades, with a bamboo frame that, when closed, fits closely together, and thus protects the silk from soil and dust.

The latest pineapple-eyer is in forcep style, with scoop-shaped nipper that gouges most cleanly.

Among the latest porch jardiniers none are more "summery" or effective than the huge dark green wicker ones that have a diameter of two feet.

The latest fruit-juice extractor is one of the most appreciated of modern appliances for the housewife. It extracts fully 25 per cent. more juice than any other extractor, and is as useful for grape-fruit, oranges, etc., as it is for the lemon. It represents the most scientific methods for extracting, straining and conducting fruit juice simplified into one instrument. The juice may be squeezed directly into a bottle, glass or pitcher, clear and free from pulp or seeds.

The latest nut cracker, a French importation, supplies a long-felt want. It has a firm grip that will include every size nut from the smallest to the large size walnut and cream nut, and by comparatively slight pressure upon a compound lever it breaks the shell, the nut falling either into the hand or a receptacle.

Among the latest accessories for summer vacation paraphernalia, nothing is daintier than the little Japanese bag-baskets. A small, light-weight woven basket is covered with delicately-colored or embroidered silk that may be drawn together by a silk cord. While generally used for sewing baskets, these are equally useful as handkerchief cases and crocheting baskets.

OWNERS REFUSE TO TAKE $300,000 IN GOLD COIN

Interest Payment Stacked Up in Treasury Vaults Awaiting Return of Tardy Checks.

Washington, D. C., May 2.—Stacked in one of the corners of the steel-ribbed vaults of the United States Treasury $300,000 in gold coin is going begging. The Government cannot give it away; yet none of the rightful owners can be induced to take it. It represents unclaimed interest on the public debt. Somewhere in nooks and crannies and out of the way places are the Government's interest checks for the money, which never have been cashed. Some of them never will be presented, others may be brought around in time and some are being held by cautious investors.

From time to time, the Treasury attempts to call in the checks and the vagaries of human nature are shown. One citizen has more than $60,000 waiting for him and holds the checks for it. He recently was invited to cash in and made a trip to Washington to tell Treasury officials the checks were his property; he would cash them when he pleased or burn them up if he wished. If he does the latter, his money will be held in the vaults until Congress, perhaps, may dispose of it. The Treasury can do nothing but keep it.

The contractor who laid the first pavement upon Pennsylvania avenue from the Capitol to the White House has $21,000 waiting for him; it has been there many years, but the Treasury never has been able to find the rightful payee, as the contractor failed and his affairs became involved in litigation, which never has been settled.

The amounts of this seemingly ownerless fund range from thousands down to a few cents. The smaller amounts are all held for those who owned Government securities at some time or other and probably have forgotten to collect their latest interest.

Many a woman can't get along with her husband because she doesn't understand him, and many another because she does.

Lots of girls marry just out of curiosity.

Interest Increases in Revival at Moravian Church

Considerable interest is being manifeested in the revival services conducted each evening at the Moravian church. The pastor preached the sermon last evening, following which four professions of faith were made; also a number of requests for prayer. Rev. J. Kenenth Pfohl, who had been preaching the sermons and was taken suddenly ill on Tuesday, necessitating his returning to his home in Winston-Salem, is reported as very much improved and hopes soon to be entirely recovered. The meetings will continue through Sunday and the pastor is assured of ministerial help in the services beginning with this evening's service.

Cincinnati, May 3.—As a result of the visit which Mrs. Theo. P. Shonts, accompanied by Mrs. Van Rensselaer Adams, made to the city, Cincinnati has lost the proposed Barnard Lincoln memorial statue offered by Mrs. Frederick Alms, widow of the Merchant Prince. Shreveport wires—"Texarkana, Texas, night letter—"About 25 per cent of acreage this section has been planted, practically all of this will be replanted on account of seed rotting. This will make our crop fully three weeks late."

TEXAS RAINFALL.

Texas rainfall past 24 hours ending 8 a. m. today: Beeville .58; Brenham .94; Corpus Christi .30; Columbus .56; Cuero .50; Galveston .62; Houston .38; Others from .10 to 1.10.

COTTON LETTER TO J. E. LATHAM.

New York, May 3.—An irregular tone continued in the market today. An easier tendency governed the trading before midday, which carried old crop positions within 1 or 2 points of yesterday's close, while the new crop reached to about yesterday's finish. One leading local spot house offered to sell 5,000 of May at 15.30. The market showed no definite trend and while an unfavorable opinion was expressed of the weather map, there was a disposition to sell new crop on the rallies.

During the early afternoon the market was generally firm as there seemed to be very little cotton for sale and bull support of the old crop months continued, although the bull brokers made no apparent effort to bid prices. Some spot houses sold small amounts of May but offerings were not heavy enough to make much impression and that position advanced to 15.36.

The failure of the market to develop more activity on the rally from the lowest point was supposed to reflect both an absence of short interest following the last fortnight of active covering and some said the failure of bullish news to create fresh outside interest.

Weather conditions are still unsatisfactory owing to continued rain or showers and low temperatures.

Liverpool is due about unchanged to 1 lower.

COTTON LETTER TO J. E. LATHAM.

New Orleans, La., May 3.—Liverpool was decidedly better than due, on new crops, which were 4 higher. Spot prices 3 lower. Sales 12,000. Liverpool cabled "—India accepted big line of cloths today."

The map shows fair weather North Central belt, cloudy elsewhere, general rain over central and South Texas and through the South central coast districts, none elsewhere. Temperatures are unseasonably low throughout the belt. In order to judge better of this, we will state that last year during the corresponding past three days temperature minimums were around 60 degrees. This year they are around 50 and below. Central Texas showing today 46 as also does the central belt and Georgia. Indications are for fair and continued cold in the North Central and Eastern States, cloudy, unsettled and warmer in the Western States. So far the rain formation over the West has not moved but is liable to come on the belt tomorrow night and Friday and cause general rains over Sunday.

A later cable from Liverpool read: "Lock out possible in Bavaria soon, affecting fully half million spindles."

The new crop is losing in earliness and this should impart strength to the August position which has been neglected lately. The contract market is very quiet, but steady around last night's closing prices.

ARK OF COVENANT STOLEN BY BRITISH EXPLORERS

Great Excitement at Jerusalem Over Theft of Sacred Treasure—Riots Follow Discovery—London Excited Also.

Special to Telegram.

London, May 3.—The theft of the Ark of the Covenant from Jerusalem where British explorers were at work has caused a great sensation, following the receipt of news of riots which followed the theft in Jerusalem, here tonight.

A Swedish Biblical scholar, while pursuing his studies into the early history of the Jews in the library of St. Sophia at Constantinople more than two years ago, discovered a cipher giving a clue to the precise whereabouts of certain sacred objects of the Jews which were buried to save them from the Romans when Jerusalem was ransacked during the reign of Titus. These objects were the Ark of the Covenant, seven branches of candlestick censor and tables of the law. The Swede submitted his cipher with its key to Oriental Judiac experts for an investigation and they declared it apparently genuine.

A British expedition of 100 set to work and these explorers are said to have bribed the sheeikhs who guarded the mosque to allow them to enter to explore beneath the sacred tomb and after digging for six nights they unearthed the objects of their search with which they left Jerusalem secretly.

Tremendous excitement prevails in Jerusalem among the moselum pilgrims who are frantic with anger at the desecration of their sacred shrine.

Jerusalem, Palestine, May 3.—Inhabitants of the "Holy City" have been aroused to a point of rioting by the operations of a party of English archeologists, accused of having excavated beneath the inviolable mosque of Omar and removed relics reputed to include the Ark of the Covenant, the censor and other sacred vessels which belonged to the tribes of Israel.

Azmy Bey, the Turkish governor, was mobbed on the streets for supposed complicity in the alleged profanation and hooted as "a pig." The mosque has been closed and is closely guarded pending the arrival from Constantinople of officials of the government, who will make an investigation.

The expedition worked for two years on a large scale, beginnin gat the village of Siloam, which lies at the southeast end of Jerusalem on the southern slope of Mount of Olives, overlooking the valley of Kedron and the pool of Siloam. The explorers are credited with having excavated a passage from the pool of Siloam toward the place where once stood Solomon's temple, built in 1012 B. C., pillaged and restored and finally destroyed by Titus A. D., 70.

ACTION

Regarding Mexican Situation will be Taken by Administration.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, May 3.—It is reported tonight that some new and important action is to be taken by the administration tomorrow in view of the current developments in Mexico. The situation seems to demand from Mexico some definite assurances, coupled with a guarantee of sufficient ability to execute them, with reference to the safety of American life and property in Mexico. It is rumored that the State Department will make some demand on Mexico equally as strong as that reported to have been made by Germany in regard to the situation at Cuernavaica. The news from Mexico was discussed tonight by certain officials who will probably make a report at the State Department tomorrow.

MAN SHIPPED AS MERCANDISE
In Box From Lawrence, Kan., To Fort Worth, Texas.

Lawrence, Kan., May 3.—Shipped from here as merchandise in a wooden box last Saturday, Banks A. Myers succeeded in reaching Fort Worth, Texas, before h ewas discovered by officials of the American Express company.

Myers' presence in the box was learned only when, almost overcome by heat and hunger, he was forced to break his way out.

Last Saturday a man bought an empty box here which had contained a talking machine. Later in the day he hired an expressman to haul the box to the American Express office, where he had made arrangements to have it shipped C. O. D. to Galveston. The box was securely nailed and weighed more than 300 pounds. Myers is being held at Fort Worth until the affair can be investigated. The police believe Myers had himself nailed in the box by confederates after making arrangements for the shipment.

Communications

Editor Telegram: I have read with much interest in your columns, "A Talk to the Sunday School Teachers," in which a strong appeal is made to our citizens to join the great host of graded school students who now claim a place in the front ranks of men and women banded together to enlighten humanity, and in the win all for Christ.

I too am interested in this work in the division of the army to which I belong, viz, the Sunday school. The "home department" of the Sunday school is very general, and I, as superintendent of this department would appeal to every attendant of West Market Street church, whose name is not enrolled in the Sunday school to join to home workers, whose object is to keep in touch with the whole world of Sunday school workers by reading with regularity the International Sunday school lesson.

Send in your name, and you will be supplied monthly with a copy of Bells' Notes on the lessons.

The minimum price of this literature is one penny a week.

Should this roll number hundreds of those earnestly searchers after truth, I feel sure Mr. Editor, your roll of contestants will be lengthened thereby, and in the end these prove to be your best winners.

Send in your names for literature to any of the following lady visitors:

Mrs. A. H. Alderman, Mrs. C. W. Curry, Mrs. E. P. Land, Mrs. J. Davis, Mrs. Lula Peebles, Miss Annie Reid, Mrs. D. B. Troy, supterintendent.

W. L. Duncan, Baltimore, has been elected by the Raleigh Young Men's Christian Association building committee as secretary of the Raleigh association that is to be formed when the building for which the subscriptions are in hand, is erected. There has been considerable discussion of the site for the building but the committee is not yet ready to act in this matter. The selection of Mr. Duncan for secretary was on recommendation of Interstate Secretary Huntington. He is a native of Baltimore, having been connected with the Baltimore Association for the past four years.

The Raleigh Episcopal churches have named delegates to the ninty-fifth annual Diocese Convention to be held with the Church of the Good Shepherd, Rocky Mount, beginning Wednesday, May 17.

It is an interesting fact that the series of addresses by Rt. Rev. Joseph Blount Cheshire, bishop of the diocese of North Carolina on the "Church in the Confederate State" are to be delivered by this distinguished churchman before the students of the General Theological Seminary, New York, May 1, 2 and 3. Also that he is to deliver them thereafter in the Divinity school, Cambridge, Mass. These special invitations have recently come to the Bishop and he has found it possible to accept.

The Eastern Carolina district internal revenue collections for April as shown in the collector's office here amounted to $300,477.

Inquiries come in with increasing frequency to the state department of insurance from people in all parts of the state as to unlicensed insurance companies, associations and fraternal orders seeking to do an "underground" business in this state without paying the state licenses and conforming to the state laws especially designed to protect the interests of the people. In a specially prepared statement as to these concerns in general Commissioner of Insurance James R. Young says: "It is true they are offering cheap insurance, but it will generally be found that the cheapness is more in the quality of the protection offered than in the rate at which it is sold." The commisisoner points out that the law requiring the licensing of the companies and the agents doing business in this state are not a curtailment of the rights of the people of the state for it will surely be found that any organization that will withhold for their state the legal license taxes will when the opportunity comes surely rob them. He says that in many cases these "underground" companies do not even pretend to pay their losses. Citizens insuring in them are at their mercy in case they have claims, for under the law the contracts are illegal and cannot be enforced in the state courts. He asks that all unlicensed companies and orders be let severely alone.

Whiskey Prescriptions Are Decreasing in Guilford County

According to the monthly report of Chief of Police Neelley, published in yesterday's Telegram the whiskey prescription business for the month of April was on a much smaller scale than for the previous month. Only 452 prescriptions were written, about thirty being only for beer. This is the smallest number of prescriptions written in any month since the ordinance requiring the publication of the reports was passed. The total amount prescribed was 460 pints or 57 1-2 gallons of whiskey and 30 dozen bottles of beer. The largest amount prescribed by a single physician was 42 1-2 pints, divided among 33 prescriptions.

FADS OF THE FASHIONS

It is about time yet to lay side one's furs, for no one can doubt that spring is on its way, for all the stores have blossomed out in fascinating arrays of all sorts of warm weather fixings that are eagerly bought by women who want the newest productions of looms and designers and first choice of selection while counters are full. The displays never seemed so tempting as they do now, and while hobbles are going out of fashion, and nothing remains but the patches to show that they ever existed, all skirts are narrow and it takes little material for any up-to-date costume.

Handbags of taffeta and moire silk are among the new smart trifles from Paris. The bags are perfectly plain, oblong, rather than square in shape, and mounted in gold or silver. Some of the taffeta ones are in checked patterns in dark blue and white or black and white. They are particularly suitable for wear with spring tailored costumes. The moire bags are also severely plain, with no fullness or gathers.

Not only the rough surface cloths will be favored for spring suits but also smooth surfaced satin wool cloths and other of like nature. It ought to be easy to be satisfied in suits this spring, unless the variety makes selection the more difficult.

Nine out of every ten waists for wear with coat and suit costumes have the sleeve cut in one with the body, and many of the most effective are made of flouncings or of bordered goods which lend themselves especially well to this type of waist.

Cluny and square meshed filet laces are first favorites for trimmings and great use is made of crochet buttons and ornaments in both silk and cotton materials. While veiled effects are still prominent they have been a little overdone, and chiffon has not proved very satisfactory for the rather strenuous wear that a suit waist gets.

Overblouses of marquisette beaded and braided and embroidered, are a better choice, and cotton marquisettes are very smartly developed with similar trimmings for these indispensible garments.

Cotton crepe waists with colored embroideries are very well shown, and for morning wear tailored shirt waists with colored stripes made of marquisette and madras, have matching turned down collars and linked cuffs.

Some of the best styles are very plain, no fullness about the upper part or sleeves, the sidepocket is a prominent detail, and yoked backs are again to the fore. This is decidedly a color season and few all white waists or dresses are shown.

Some very attractive new lamp shades for lamps of glass, Dresden or white porcelain or for candles, are made of gauze ribbon, which is sewed to a paper shade. The ribbon is gathered along one edge, and this edge is attached to the shade so that the shade is covered all over with a close gauze ruching. The shades are in white, pink and pale blue and are specially suited to the bouldoir.

Blobbs—"There isn't much work connected with the average political job, is there?" Slobbs—"Not after you get it."

OLD PEOPLE

Made Strong By Vinol.

A prominent Boston lawyer says: "My father is eighty years of age and he owes his present strength and good health to Vinol.

"During the last two trying winters he never had a cold, and was able to walk farther and do more than for years.

"I think Vinol is perfectly wonderful. It certainly is the greatest blood-making tonic for old people I ever heard of."

We wish every feeble old person in this vicinity would try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction. Fariss-Klutz Drug Co., Greensboro, N. C.

Queer Names.

"One comes across some queer names among children," said an old school teacher. "A child once gave her name to me as Iddy. When I wrote a note to her mother, asking for her real name, she replied that she did not care to name her child like everybody else, so she named her 'Idiosyncrasy.'"

Another child was named Ninevah Jones and was called "Ninny" for short. A certain little meek-faced boy who looked as if he was afraid to say his soul was his own bore the name of "Independence Smith."

And still another, whose parents belonged to the old Revolutionary stock, was known as "Yankee Doodle Brown."

A little negro girl, as black as the ace of spades, was called "Snowball White."

Even the man with red hair hates to get bald.

Opportunity makes the man, a press agent the actress.

Many a man who wears whiskers is a bare-faced liar.

"CASCARETS" SPLENDID FOR ELDERLY FOLKS

The Rules for Old People is—One Cascaret Daily. The Bowels, Like Other Muscles, Grow less active With Age—They Need Help.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. And most of them need them daily. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at sixty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. And there is no matter of choice here. The only such tonic is Cascarets and they cost only 10 cents per box.

SMALL COTERIE RUNNING HOUSE

Clark, Underwood and Fitzgerald Are Powerful.

REFORM OF RECORD IS SLOW

Effort to Make Government Publication a True Report of What Congress Does Makes Slight Progress, and Plan to Send It to All Voters Also Has but Little Support.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, May 3.—(Special.)—A small coterie is running the house of representatives as it has always done, no matter which party is in control. As the house is increased in size the power of this coterie will become more powerful, and the average member will be one of a majority to stand behind the small group. The English house of commons is conducted in much the same way.

The most powerful man in the house at present is Congressman Underwood. He is the floor leader and so far has not engendered any opposition in his own party. He has compelled the minority leaders to respect him and has shown good generalship in managing the house.

It would be difficult thus early in the session to group the half dozen men who really control the house, but Champ Clark, Underwood and Fitzgerald are three of them, and the most important three.

Progress Is Slow.

Those senators who want to have the Congressional Record sent to every household and those members of the house who want to reform the Record so that it will really be a record and not a vehicle to carry what members would have said if any one would listen to them are making very slow progress.

In the first place, the "leave to print" system is about the only way many congressmen can get their burning thoughts before the country, as they cannot get time to say all that they would like to in the course of a session. As to widespread circulation of the Record, it may be said that the people of this country are too well supplied with newspapers and periodical literature at low rates to care much about the Record.

Not Champ's Business.

Representative Murdock under guise of a parliamentary inquiry was trying to ascertain if different headings on different printed speeches meant that one was delivered in debate and the other under "leave to print." He said the speaker had control of such matters under the rule. "That is hardly a parliamentary inquiry," replied Champ and added, "And it is absolutely certain that the speaker is not going into the business of writing headnotes for other people's speeches."

New England Is There.

Come what may, New England will have representation on the senate finance committee, which handles the tariff. Always she has at least three members on this important committee. Two members dropped out at the close of the last congress, but two others are added. There is one difference, however, at this time, as one of the new members is the only Democrat from the six New England states, Johnson of Maine.

Careless of His Record.

Congressman Cooper of Wisconsin dug up a Record of sixteen years ago when Uncle Joe Cannon was making a speech and showed that the ex-speaker was somewhat inconsistent.

"Why," replied Cannon, "when I first came to congress I was thirty-six years old and was for free trade. A few years later I was for free coinage of silver. But I have learned something in all these years.

"I suppose you could go through my record during the past forty years and find many inconsistencies, but I do not care. I stand for what I think is right now as I see it. No man with a long public career can keep a consistent record if he amounts to anything."

Surveying the Country.

Only a very few people are aware that the United States geological survey is engaged in making a topographical survey of the whole country. When the geological survey was first inaugurated it was for the purpose of determining the location of minerals on public lands. Now more than half of the money expended for the institution is for surveys of lands in the eastern states which have been for a century in private ownership.

Minerals seem to be of little consequence. Geology does not cut much figure, but careful maps of the surveyed districts are made for those who desire them. In many cases the states co-operate with the general government in making these surveys.

Believes In Commission Rule.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma believes in the commission governments for towns and cities as bringing them in closer touch with the people. He has found that about 200 cities in the country have tried the plan and made a success of it. So far it has not been tried in any of the very large cities where there is so much complaint about the misgovernment, but Owen believes that it would prove effective in large as well as small cities.

FEAR ABSENT IN RING CHAMPIONS

Title Holders Possess Absolute Confidence In Their Ability.

LACK OF FAITH BEAT JEFF.

When He Met Johnson He Was Scared to Death—Years Before He Thought No Man Could Beat Him—Confidence and Determination Made Johnson and Nelson.

What is it that makes a fighter a champion? What is it that lifts him above the common plane of his division into that sphere of undivided excellence wherein he towers above his competitors like a Goddess of Liberty? Is it that his physical ability is so much superior, is it that his mental power is so much keener, or is his individuality, his faith in himself, so much deeper than that possessed by others whom he passed in the race for distinction?

None of these elements alone is responsible. All of them, blended properly, combine to make a champion of a man, and luck, too, in the final analysis, is an undeniable factor. Luck has bestowed many a fighter with a halo of kingship. Luck has likewise removed many a crown.

But, despite the fact that a champion must have several essentials, there is one thing far ahead of all the rest that even a second rate pummeler needs to possess. That is absolute fearlessness, or, turned around, perfect twelve inches to the foot confidence. No gloveman who lacked this important attribute ever ascended to the apex of his class, or, if he did, remained there for any length of time.

Many Gymnasium Fighters.

No coward ever made a fighter. No coward ever held a championship for very long, nor a man whose duct of confidence was not proportionate to his other assets. There are a thousand boys today who can give a dazzling exhibition in a gymnasium, but who when they set foot in a public arena to fight in earnest are awful disappointments. Why is this? They fear themselves, they underestimate their ability, and when their gloves fly out there is not the cocksureness back of them. They do not unsheath all their physical force, for the simple reason that they are afraid to, and their mental faculties do not perform proficiently for the same reason.

Fear whipped Jim Jeffries last July. A study of the photographs of the big fellow when he was in his prime and just before the Reno fiasco shows two entirely different characters. When Jeff met Fitzsimmons, Corbett and Sharkey he was all determination. The facial expression, the self reliant pose, gives every evidence of his great confidence in himself. Now see him at Reno, a much changed man. There is an air of uncertainty about him. His face bears a hesitating look. It seems as though he has given much thought to the Johnson part of the fight. Back a few years ago he did not concern himself so much about the caliber of an opponent. He imagined there was no man but what he could beat, and, although he disliked fighting, when he took his seat in the one corner of the ring he was supremely certain of himself.

Nelson Was Not Fearful.

Bat Nelson took many terrible wallopings during his career, but he did so because that was his method of fighting and because he was positive of what the end would be. He believed his physical power was greater than that of his antagonist, and he was sure that ultimately the result would favor him. It could not be otherwise. He entered the ring for every battle with his spirit crying for victory. It was to be his victory, not the other fellow's. And so he won and continued to win until he opposed a boy whose confidence was just as great as his.

Nelson is not the same man today, it can be wagered. Wolgast took some of the nerve from him, inspired him in a slight degree with fear. Possibly Nelson did not realize it when he met Moran, but he was inclined to doubt his ability just a little, and he was more timid. A beating makes cowards of us all. The Battler still declares he is as good as ever, but down in his heart something tells him he is not.

Jack Johnson is confident to the point of egotism. He has an exceedingly high and lovely opinion of his really great prowess. If he hadn't he would not be champ today. Because of his indubitable faith in himself he chased Tommy Burns half way around the world to secure a match with him. During the preparation for the Jeffries contest last summer he was a care free negro, who seemed to worry little about anything. When he doffed his bath robe on that hot July afternoon he was a big, courageous man-animal.

What is it that makes a fight? Confidence on the part of both participants. When confidence meets confidence there is always sure to be a throbbing battle. But if one man fears himself ever so little that man is going to be beaten.

PITCHER COOMBS HAS ONE PECULIAR HOBBY.

Jack Coombs, the steel armed pitcher of the Philadelphia Americans, has one hobby—a collection of pipes. No matter where he travels, he tours the lanes, small streets and the curiosity shops. He is always in hunt of another trophy for his smoking emporium.

He has every style, bore and caliber, but he confesses that the sweetest one of the lot is an old corncob furnace that he whiffs after a battle on the diamond. Coombs is a quiet fellow, but any one desiring to open up a conversation with the mighty man from Maine only has to talk "pipes" and he is sure to be entertained by the peerless pitcher.

KEEP AN EYE ON JACKSON.

Cleveland's Crack Young Outfielder Out For Batting Honors This Season.

Probably the work of no player on the Cleveland team is being more closely watched than that of Joe Jackson, the Naps' brilliant center fielder. The young ex-Southern leaguer, who led the American league batters last year with an average of .387 for the twenty games in which he participated, has declared he is out for the batting honors of the country. Last summer Jackson was a sensation in the field, at bat and on the base lines in the Southern circuit. He looked like four aces to a man with his last peso in a showdown to the Cleveland fans last fall.

This season he appears to be as good if not a bit better than the closing days of 1910. He is a terrific hitter, wielding a bat that would make a Samson hesitate. American league pitchers say they will find his weakness pretty soon and slow him up, but old timers who have watched him shake their heads and insist the soft spoken boy is another Lajoie, a batter without a weakness. It is certain that Jackson last fall faced the best pitchers in the league and that they all looked alike to him. In addition to his splendid batting, Jackson is as fast a man as Ty Cobb.

He covers a wonderful amount of ground in the outfield, and his throwing is of the sort that makes the blase sit up and toss their hats into the air. Jackson played with the New Orleans club last season and led his league in batting with a percentage of .354.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

HINTS FOR THE BOUDOIR

(By MILDRED WYCKOFF.)

To Keep the Eyes Bright.

The best way to keep the eyes looking bright is to bathe them every morning with pure cold water, and always keep the blood in good condition. On no account put drops into the eyes to brighten them, as you might injure your sight.

When the face gets very dirty, bathe it with warm water first, then rub a little cold cream into the skin. Let it remain on for about 10 minutes, then wipe off with an old linen handkerchief. Bathe the face again in warm water, and then give it a final rinsing in cold water.

Sunken Cheeks.

Sunken cheeks usually show a general depleted state of the system. An egg diet is an excellent thing to help along this condition.

A developing cream can be made by mixing one ounce of lanolin and one-half an ounce of cocoa butter; rub this into the cheeks with the fingers, drawing upward and outward the principal muscles of the cheeks.

A lotion of tannin and champhor applied to the nose will do much to make the nostrils smaller.

A little pure vasaline rubbed on the edge of the eyelids every night will encourage the growth of the eye-lashes. Be careful not to get it into the eyes, however.

HAIR TELLS CHARACTER.

Color of Hair Said to Indicate a Person's Temperament.

Many people believe that blonde, or light hair denotes affection and dark hair constancy. A person without hair is not devoid of character; far from it. The disposition of the average baldheaded man is to show such solicitude for the welfare of others, that he neglects himself. A germ causes baldness. Feet So Sore Couldn't Walk Down Stairs-

TIZ Cured Her Quick.

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crockett, of Jeffersonville. TIZ DID IT. Mrs. Crockett says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs one foot at a time. She had not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years, except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use TIZ. It's different. It acts right off. It cures sore feet to stay cured. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25c per box, or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Too Much.

Little Dorothy had just begun to go to Sunday school and had been much interested in the story of the creation, the story of the flood, etc., as her teacher had told them to the class.

One day Dorothy was taken by her uncle to see menagerie. When she came home she told her mother all about the strange animals she had seen.

She enjoyed the parrots and the funny monkeys; she called the tigers "big pussies," and the huge, homely hippopotamus had evidently made a most unfavorable impression on her youthful mind. She described it to her mamma as well as she could—the huge, ugly beast with its great red mouth.

Then she was silent a few moments, thinking matters over in her small mind. Dorothy usually had quite decided opinions of her own.

Suddenly she asked, "Mamma, did God make everything? Did he make all the animals?"

"Yes, dear," replied her mother.

"Did he—did he make the—hippopotamus, mamma?"

"Yes, dear."

"Well!" said Dorothy, in a tone of great decision, giving her yellow curls a toss, "then I'm not going to Sunday school any more!"

URGES REAL STAGE-AMERICAN.

Diplomat Proposes Idea at British Theatrical Fund Dinner.

London, May 3.—At the annual dinner tonight of the Royal Theatrical Fund, presided over by George Alexander, actor-manager, the American Consul General, John Griffiths, in the course of a humorous speech, said that nothing probably would do more to strengthen Anglo-American friendship than the the representation upon the English stage of an American of culture, refinement and high purpose, instead of the wretched caricature which has so long figured in his name.

Laurence Irving, younger son of the late Sir Henry Irving, echoed Mr. Griffith's sentiments.

ETIQUETTE AND LOVE

A Lesson That Effie Admitted She Needed.

By OTHO B. SENGA.

It was characteristic of Ross Brady that he laughed, although somewhat bitterly, as the gaudy autocar dashed by. He had received but the merest nod of recognition from Miss Danvers.

"Boss, my boy," he soliliquized, "you must have made a mistake in thinking you were invited to join this festive crowd."

He took a small envelope from his inner coat pocket and read portions of the note in a mumbling undertone, adding caustic comments as he proceeded:

"'My dear Ross.' M'm, dear Ross feels pretty cheap—about 23 cents' worth at the present moment! 'There will be a small party of us at Wiers from the 16th to the 27th.' Well, I'm only two days in the rear—not bad for a laboring man! 'It would be very pleasant if you could be there at the same time.' M'm, pleasant! I wonder just where the pleasure comes in! Well, here we are. Ross, brace up!"

He furtively flicked the dust from his shoes and ran lightly up the broad terraces to the hotel piazza.

He had hoped that Effie would wait for him. She must have known that he was on his way to call upon her.

The torturing minutes seemed hours after he had sent up his card, and he felt the scarlet blood mount to his forehead again and again as some laughing girl stole a second glance at his handsome face and stalwart figure.

When Effie came down the stairs gowned in white she seemed to the embarrassed young fellow the embodiment of coolness and self possession.

Her greeting was hardly courteous, in degree removed from cordiality, and she spoke with some asperity.

"Why, Ross Brady, where are you staying? I expected you to register here!"

He crimsoned under the reproof of her voice and manner; then the square shoulders were set back, and the heavy chin hardened.

"You knew, Effie," gravely, "that I could not afford the rates here. I am at a farmhouse a mile away. I can be with you whenever you wish, Effie," pleadingly.

She seemed not to hear him.

"And your call just now, Ross," fretfully, "is wholly without regard to etiquette. I only came down to tell you that you can come again tomorrow, and be sure to send up two cards, one for me and one for Mrs. Lyons, the chaperon of the party.

He laughed shortly.

"Effie, the card I sent up is probably the last one I have. My vacation is necessarily a brief one, and"—

"Oh, Ross," in an excited whisper, "here comes Miss Van Vance! Do go! I mustn't be seen talking to you like this. She is from New York and awfully"—

Brady waited no longer. He bowed formally to Effie and turned sharply toward the door, meeting Miss Van Vance on the threshold.

She looked squarely into his eyes as they passed with an expression that he afterward recalled and wondered about.

"She's a good deal older than Effie and those other girls," he mused. "I wonder"— Then he shrugged his shoulders impatiently. "What difference does it make anyhow? I'll write Effie a note. I was a donkey not to think about cards. I don't wonder she was annoyed. She wants to be correct about matters of etiquette, of course."

But Brady's honest heart was sore indeed on the following day when the messenger returned with no answer to the pleading little note he sent to Effie.

He put on a rough suit of flannel and started for a tramp, striding rapidly along the country road, his handsome face moody and forbidding.

The sound of wheels roused him from his unpleasant reflections.

"It is country etiquette," said a clear voice, "for one who drives to ask one who walks to 'have a lift.'"

He turned quickly. It was Miss Van Vance, seated in a light Stanhope, driving a high stepping bay. She smiled down into his astonished face, reined and turned the animal with a quick movement of her supple wrist, glancing invitingly at the seat beside her.

Brady had never before been challenged in just such a way, and his blood rose. His usual diffidence vanished; he stepped promply into the vehicle and seated himself, saying easily, "Is it etiquette for the one who walks to introduce himself to the one who drives?"

"It isn't necessary," coolly. "You are Ross Brady. You were brought up on a farm in northern Vermont. You have studied all sorts of ologies and isms, and you are now taking the advanced course in metallurgy at the Harvard summer school."

"Who told you?" rashly.

"No one. I simply put two and two together. The sum is seven! I wasn't sure, but your question proves it."

"I am easily trapped," admitted Brady.

He felt a sudden sense of ease and confidence and of comradeship with this stately looking girl, and almost before he knew it he was pouring forth the whole story of his aims and ambitions, his plans and hopes, even to his love for little Effie Danvers and his chagrin at her cool reception.

Miss Van Vance listened interestingly, smiling half sadly.

"Mr. Brady," she said slowly, "I am older than you, and I have had, perhaps, wider opportunities for observing human nature. And I am like Samanthy Allen—I know women just like a book because I've been one quite a spell. It is a woman's nature to want a man to beat down all barriers, even those she herself has erected. Is the hint sufficient, Mr. Brady?"

"I think so," quietly, "and I thank you, Miss Van Vance."

He resolved to act upon the suggestion, yet it was two days before he summoned courage to go again to the hotel.

"Miss Danvers is not here just now," said the talkative bellboy. "That whole party is out on the lake—that is, they're gettin' ready to go. You'll find them, I guess, if you go down," pocketing a dime with accustomed celerity. "They're goin' in a launch."

For an instant Brady was tempted to go away. Then he thought of Miss Van Vance and ran quickly down the steps to the boat landing.

Miss Van Vance, standing on the float, greeted him delightedly.

"I am so glad you happened along. Can you spare the time to go around the lake with us?"

Brady surprised himself with the ready ease of his acceptance.

Miss Van Vance introduced him with an air of proprietorship. "My friend, Mr. Brady," adding as she presented him to Miss Danvers, "The fact that you are both Vermonters ought to be an immediate bond between you two."

Poor little Effie colored and faltered. She dared not say they were old time friends in the face of Brady's somewhat formal acknowledgment of the introduction.

With delicate tact Miss Van Vance drew out Brady's gift for narrative, and he was soon in the midst of an absorbing story of a wild fox hunt.

The other two young men of the party were seated in the bow of the launch, smoking.

Suddenly a sheet of flame shot high into the air. A lighted match had ignited the gasoline in the escape basin, and an explosion of the main tank seemed inevitable. The young fellow employed to run the launch was paralyzed with fear.

The girls shrieked in terror, and two or three sprang upon the seat to leap into the water.

"Sit down!" shouted Brady sternly.

He plunged his hand into the fire and turned the valve, thus stopping the flow of oil from the main tank. Then he threw himself against the flames wherever they appeared, beating them out with his coat and bare hands.

The other men, recovering from their momentary panic, wet their caps and assisted him.

Then some one screamed again, and Miss Danvers' clothing was seen to be on fire in the back. Brady instantly threw his arms around her, smothering the flames against his own body.

No one was more than slightly injured, except Brady. His arms and hands were quite badly burned, and the physician looked grave as he dressed them.

"I hope you will pardon the manner in which I embraced you, Miss Danvers," said Brady nonchalantly. "I fear it was hardly according to etiquette," glancing humorously at Miss Van Vance.

"You are a splendid hero!" cried Mrs. Lyons hysterically. "Effie should be proud to be embraced by such a man."

"Even if he is an utter stranger," added Miss Van Vance significantly.

Effie threw back her girlish head defiantly and stepped to Brady's side.

"He is not a stranger!" she exclaimed, putting her hand caressingly on his shoulder. "Ross and I have been engaged ever since we were children. Only I—I"—

"Never mind, Effie," interrupted Ross tenderly; "you needn't try to explain."

"I congratulate you both," said Miss Van Vance cordially, "only," teasingly, as she held Effie's hand warmly in her own—"only, Miss Danvers, your manner of announcing your engagement is so wholly without regard to"—

Effie smiled brightly through her tears. "I know, Miss Van Vance, and I deserve a lesson. You have been a good friend to me."

"Better than you know, little Effie," murmured Miss Van Vance to herself as she turned away, "and the temptation was greater than you can possibly understand."

Kaiser and Cafetier.

The kaiser possesses the property at Corfu known as the Achilleion, which was once the villa of the ill fated Empress Elizabeth of Austria. It is an enchanting spot and has been beautified in every way which German art can suggest, yet a disturbing element has arisen. On the summit of the hill which dominates the Achilleion an enterprising native cafetier has set up a little rustic cafe. Its locus is an ideal spot, so tourists select it for a birdseye view of Corfu. When the kaiser wishes a little change from his strenuous work and takes a stroll in the ground he is overlooked by tourists. Negotiations were opened to acquire the cafe, but the proprietor demanded £12,000 for his enterprise. The kaiser said it was too much, but the cafetier replied that the cafe was to him what Prussia is to the king. The matter now has passed into the domain of diplomacy, we learn from a Paris contemporary.—London Globe.

Too Much Experience.

"Shall we advertise for a man with experience?"

"Well, I don't know. The last man had so much experience that we couldn't teach him anything."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

SWAT-FEST IN WINSTON CAPTURED BY PATRIOTS

Winston-Salem, May 3.—In one of the most remarkable swat-fests ever pulled off on the local diamond Greensboro walloped the Twins this afternoon by the score of nine to four. During the contest twenty-two hits for a total of 42 bases were rounded out. In the wielding of the willow the Patriots were superior. The game was featured by home runs by Greensboro's battery, Nippert and Morrisey, the two runs following in quick succession in the sixth. Morrisey allowed ten hits, but they were well scattered. Doak was in the game, holding down the third station. Doyle has charge of the second station, while Clapp was relegated to the left field. Richard, Clapp and Corwin were satisfied with three-baggers, while Doyle and Doak got two hits each.

ELECTRICIANS MADE ELEVEN CONNECTIONS

Anderson, May 3.—During the first part of the game today things looked dark for the locals but the Electricians finally made connections with Hankie's delivery and during the last three frames made 11 runs winning from Charlotte, 11 to 3. Kuse was taken out in the third inning after a home-run by Coutts for Charlotte and Farmer was put in. He proved effective. The score by innings:

MUSICIANS BREAK WEB OF SPINNERS

Spartanburg, May 3.—The locals won from the Greenville aggregation today, 14 to 2, through the errors of the Spinners. Trammell twirled a fair game but had absolutely no support. Vickery was excellent and though he allowed nine hits they were well scattered. Doak's three-bagger brought in two runs for the visitors and two home runs scored three superfluous runs for the locals.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.

Two Big Bills Up In Congress.

Washington, May 3.—With the House struggling toward a vote on the free list bill and the Senate committee on finance hearing arguments on Canadian reciprocity, today signalized the real beginning of the tariff extra session. Hitherto considerable of tariff legislation practically has been confined to the House.

By an agreement reached yesterday by the Senate finance committee objections will not be confined to the reciprocity measure solely but, because of its intimate relationship to the entire tariff question interpellation, will be extended to include the free list measure. Hearings will extend throughout next week.

The Senate was not in session today but will be tomorrow.
